

Esquimalt High School

Celebrating 100 years 1915-2015

Hi everyone,

A group of students at Esquimalt High School would like to gather stories from alumni about their experiences at the school. Your memories of your time at the school could be featured in one or more videos that the school is producing to promote the school and celebrate its centennial this year. Stories may also be included in other digital formats that the students are helping to produce. All of the stories will complement the article that Marilyn Mcrimmon is writing for the Times-Colonist to be published in The Islander section on April 5th.

There are at least three ways you could participate:

1. Reply with your answers to the questions below;
2. Ask other alumni to respond by forwarding this notice to them or sending us their contact info or;
3. Suggest the names of other people you are aware of who attended Esquimalt High School and a bit about why you feel it would be appropriate to include information about those people.

Many who attended the school have gone on to great and interesting accomplishments and we look forward to celebrating those through this centennial project. But we also hope to help the students involved to discover special memories from the ordinary lives of people in their broader community. Through these conversations students and the members of the Esquimalt High School community will reflect about the role that our experiences at the school have played in our lives.

Please provide:

1. Your full name;
2. The year(s) you attended Esquimalt High School;
3. A sentence or two (or more!) about something you particularly remember from your years at EHS. This can be anything you like, from a memorable social activity, a favourite teacher, a sports team, a group of friends, a club, the building itself, etc.

We can't promise to use every story, but every story will be read and valued. We encourage married women to include their maiden names as well as their married names.
